Seven active and one associate members won seats on the Board of Governors after lightly-fought campaigns ending at noon, Friday, April 30.

The results were announced by Elections Committee Chairman Grace Naismith at the annual meeting that night. (See box above).

The active winners were Burnett, Saffir, Lower, Crissan, Massow, Frank, and Gladstone. Alternate board members: Wilford, Salazar, Harper, and Kline. (The vote as announced showed Kline and Tom O'Toole with 41 ballots each. In a run-off by secret vote of attendees at the meeting, Kline won 23-10).

George Dugan captured the associate members spot, with the alternate positions won by Frummer and Thompson.

The seemingly light voting drew critical questioning. At first glance, it appeared that the ballots might have totaled only 79. Actually, as the committee chief explained, there were 205 legitimate ballots, while 315 received were ineligible for a variety of reasons, including non-payment of dues or house accounts, or resignations.

Other business at meeting

The agreement between OPC and the Correspondents Fund permitting the Club to unshackle itself from the 40th Street building has been approved by the N.Y. State Attorney General and sealed.

This was the chief specific, definite development reported by President Will Oursler at the meeting.

Not so specific, however, were the answers to persistent inquiries centering on the key question -- "Where do we go from here, and when?"

The timing of the evacuation was set by Oursler as "definitely before the end of June." There were no qualifications to that deadline, as there had been about the May 1 date and then the rumored May 15 move.

Oursler reported that the "Time-Life deal was very close" -- meaning the negotiations for OPC to occupy a portion of the second floor of that mid-manchattan building (as reported in previous Bulletins).

Oursler outlined the complexities -- legal, financial and others -- involved in acquiring that location. His cautious appraisal of the chances for consummating the change without establishing an interim "clubhouse" -- possibly in the Columbia Club -- left many observers with a pessimistic view.

Treasurer Len Saffir's comments accompanying his detailed financial report (see separate story), for which he was applauded, were not only cautious but, in the opinion of many, fueled doubt about OPC's future. While pointing to improvements, he declared OPC was "on the critical list...still in bad shape...now losing money daily."

Ralph Schultz, board member serving on the special committee negotiating for new quarters, took issue with the "conservative" approach, strongly assuring the membership "there are no serious obstacles" blocking the move into the Time-Life Building. He said flatly that OPC "will move there shortly, that this will attract new members, create revenue and revitalize the OPC."

Jack Frummer, just elected an associate alternate board member, had called for a more aggressive approach, predicting the loss of "1,000 more members unless we get a clubhouse."

Joe Peters expressed confidence in the outcome and praised those directing the efforts.

Ed Cunningham's motion for a full vote of confidence in the officers and board met with applause, and that was "30" to the 32nd annual fiscal year of the OPC.

SECRETARY GIVES MEMBERSHIP COUNT

The report of the OPC Secretary, Anita Diamant Berke, at the annual meeting showed the Club's total membership now at 2,051.

No precise figures were available at the meeting on how much of a decline this represented from the peak. President Will Oursler noted at one point during the discussion that the "membership is about the same as a year ago."

The breakdown:

Active resident	394	Associate resident	662
Active nonresident	276	Associate nonresident	336
Active overseas	307	Affiliate	47
Honorary & Life members		29*

*Among these is twice-past-President Bob Considine who, because of this special designation, did not receive an elections ballot. It was, however, delivered in time, by hand, by Grace Naismith, Elections Committee Chairman.

Bush speaks at OPC annual awards dinner

BY RALPH MAJOR

An eloquent plea for U.S. support of United Nations was voiced by Ambassador George Bush before the 32nd Overseas Press Club Annual Awards Dinner on April 23.

Speaking to more than 300 OPC members and their guests in the Hotel Pierre ballroom, Ambassador Bush said that too many Americans have a "hohum" attitude toward the UN which, he conceded, had not "worked as well as we thought it would."

The new envoy to the UN said the organization "desperately needs a win" and that Ambassador Gunnar Jarring in the Middle East, "can present a chance for world peace."

Ambassador Bush defended President Nixon's "right of advocacy" after a policy decision is made, and urged all citizens to support that advocacy.

The dinner began with singing of the National Anthem led by famed vocalist Maxine Sullivan, honorary co-president of the OPC Jazz Club.

In opening remarks, Master of Ceremonies Bob Considine called for broader coverage of global hostilities, facetiously adding, "if we're kept out of these wars, what happens to the Club?"

Preceding a graphic presentation of OPC awards, Ben Grauer, Correspondents Fund President, saluted, "these men who dared to report events; the OPC is proud of them." Several of the recipients had traveled from Viet Nam to accept their awards.

President Will Oursler presided at the dinner preceded by a cocktail reception. Stephen Kersen was banquet chairman.

Damp eyes were noted when the houselights came up after some moving Viet Nam footage had been screened.

* * *

Past Presidents looked most jaunty with their presidential medals dangling below their black ties.

* * *

Songstress Maxine Sullivan practically held court at her table as fans lined up for autographs and kisses. She also sang several numbers with the Pierre Hotel's band.

* * *

Ambassador Bush not only departed from his "prepared text", but threw it down on the table as he launched into his forceful comments on the UN.

OPC fellowship alumni on the move

By KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN

For most of the Club's membership, there's a warm little glow of reminiscence associated with most recent news of the trio of recipients of the OPC Foundation foreign work-travel fellowships, awarded in the palmier days of the mid-1960's. To wit;

Charles Bierbauer

Word from Nancy Jones of the journalism faculty at Penn State University, who is just back from a trip to Vienna, is that she encountered there alumnus Charles Bierbauer, who is currently Eastern European correspondent for Westinghouse broadcasting. She reports that after his fellowship year, he returned to Penn State and earned his Master's on a thesis based on his study of the Yugoslav press system — the project for which he was given the OPC stipend.

He is scheduled as a speaker at a seminar on international communications, to be held in June or July in Skopje, Yugoslavia.

Earnest McCarry

Earnest McCarry, his immediate predecessor as the fellowship holder, chose Argentina as the scene of his endeavors to improve his Spanish and to gain practical experience as a foreign correspondent. He met and married a vivacious Argentinian senorita, and is now based in Buenos Aires, as he has been for the past few years as correspondent for CBS and for McGraw-Hill's Business Week magazine.

Robert Lee

Robert Lee, the initial fellowship winner, concentrated on North African politics and other developments there, with particular effectiveness.

He became so engrossed with that part of the world that — after post-graduate work at Columbia Journalism — he returned there with his wife, for another year. At present he is in Colorado Springs, Colo., finishing a book on the Algerian revolution. Having completed the groundwork for his doctorate at Columbia, he will use the same basic material for his thesis. Next year he is scheduled to join the faculty at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, to teach political science.

For OPC — a good investment in each case. To our proteges, thanks, boys — and congratulations!

Treasurer's report: a measured look

Leonard Saffir, OPC Treasurer, presented the following report at the club's annual meeting. A table of income and expenses is also reprinted on this page.

Treasurer's Report

Our 32nd fiscal year ended today with the club's overall financial condition showing a marked improvement in comparison to this time one year ago. However, while there is reason to rejoice, we still remain very much on the critical list.

For the club to stay on its recovery course, and, in fact, to survive, it will require an enormous amount of hard work and cooperation by the entire membership, and not just a handful, as well as a thorough understanding of our situation.

First, before reporting on the accomplishments of the year, and we've had many, it is important to review the condition we were in when this administration took office on May 1, 1970.

We were faced with a staggering $400,000 debt, an eviction notice, a long list of law suits, extremely serious problems with both state and federal tax officials, an accounting office operating in a state of chaos, incomplete books, no responsible systems in force and annual losses of approximately $140,000 and $100,000 in the previous two years.

Now, despite substantial losses of income from dues and sizeable losses in the banquet and office rental department due to our tenuous situation, along with the depressed economy, rapidly increasing costs, labor increases and extraordinary legal expenses, I can report at this time that our loss for the current fiscal year has been considerably reduced.

For 11 months ended on March 31, 1971 our loss was $31,429.59.

One year ago, our loss for the complete fiscal period amounted to $104,965.38.

This past year:

1. We paid off long overdue debts to suppliers amounting to $97,081.21. Our credit rating with suppliers, very poor a year ago, is excellent today.

2. We made payments of $9,000 on delinquent sales tax accounts and made agreement with the State Tax Department to pay off the additional debt.

3. We paid off $6,000 in delinquent withholding taxes.

4. We paid off back obligations on accounts of dues, pensions and insurance to our union.

5. We have instituted a system of accounting controls in the bar and grill.

6. We have adopted normal accounting procedures and begun to accrue such expenses as accounting fees and vacation pay.

7. We have hired a professional, highly competent controller, to run the business office.

Wiping out of our huge debt to the Correspondents Fund and receipt from them of $65,000 in cash will occur shortly upon receiving the necessary court approval of the settlement of our agreement with the Fund and after our removal from 54 West 40th Street.

An indication of our achievements this past year is contained in a letter of reference from our bankers, The Chase Manhattan Bank, who wrote this month: "The officers of the Club are wellknown to us and we believe them to be capable and responsible individuals...based on our experience, we believe that they have established a responsible and sound fiscal basis of operation."

For the future I recommend to the membership and Board of Governors that (1) a new and complete food, labor and supply costs accounting system be designed and implemented (2) we contract for an outside accounts receivable computer system to handle all our billing (3) budgets, goals and objectives of the club be firmly established by the Board and that they be constantly monitored and (4) consideration be given to a constitutional amendment to change the annual meeting from April 30 to May 31 so that complete one year financials, instead of 11-month figures, can be reported at the annual meeting. (Our fiscal year now ends on the same day of the annual meeting).

Following this report is a complete statement of income and expenses for the 11 months ended March 31 and a departmental breakdown. (Only the statement of income and expense is reported in the Bulletin, with the concurrence of the Treasurer. Ed.)

I ask that this report be published in its entirety in the OPC Bulletin for the entire membership to read.

In closing I would like to thank the staff, and particularly our controller, George Vilar, for their loyalty and great contributions to our recovery program.

Respectfully submitted,
Leonard Saffir.

Metropolitan Opera Studio and OPC music lovers sing Auld Lang Syne

By HERBERT KUPFERBERG

In a musical program that was a cross between the farewells to the old Metropolitan Opera House and the old Palace Theatre, the Music Committee sang a last goodbye to the OPC Clubhouse before a large audience on April 28.

The program was billed as a tribute by the Metropolitan Opera Studio to the Club, but as Music Committee Chairman Jack Frummer pointed out, it was equally a tribute by the Club to the Studio, which over the last ten years has provided many evenings of music in the 10th floor lounge.

For its farewell to 40th Street, the Studio, under the direction of John Gutman, presented a program sung by no fewer than 14 young singers. Every number on the program carried out the official theme of "Farewells, Addios and Arrivederchis." Included were such numbers as the Farewell Trio from Così fan tutte, Valentine's Farewell from Faust, "Adieu forets" from Tchaikovsky's Joan of Arc, "Adieu, notre petite table" from Massenet's Manon, and a half dozen others.

In the popular portion of the program were such items as Tosti's "Goodbye," "So long, dearie" from Hello Dolly, and, most hopeful of all, Noel Coward's "I'll see you again." The rousing finale was "Arrivederci, Press Club," poured out by all 14 singers to the melody of "Arrivederci, Roma," with special Studio-written lyrics that said: "Soon again you will be rising.

And once more we'll be concertizing"

The singers who made the evening so memorable were Karen Altman, Catherine Christensen, Barbara Hoffman, Asuncion Deiparine, Joyce Gerber, Florence Quivar, Melvin Brown, David Griffith, Jerry Siena, Brent Ellis, Wayne Turnage, Leslie Guinn, Terence Hawkins and John Ostendorf.

Let's hope they'll all soon be inaugurating the next concert series at the new club.

Letters

A QUESTION OF SEMANTICS

I wish to add a word of agreement with Ansel E. Talbert. His letter commenting on the different treatment by the Bulletin of the appearances of W. Averell Harriman and Herbert Klein at the clubhouse was well taken. To a practised newspaperman's eye the inferior presentation given to Mr. Klein, and the invidious headline, "Harriman's Goal: To Make Nixon ex-President," were glaring. Added to this were the rude words, "We don't. Ed.," appended to Mr. Talbert's letter. Really!

Mention is also in order in regard to the expression, "U.S. incursion into Cambodia." The word incursion means "a sudden or rapid invasion; a predatory or harassing inroad; a raid" (Webster's New International). The American move was not predatory or harassing; it was designed to seize the supplies of and disperse the scores of thousands of North Vietnamese troops that had invaded Cambodia years previously and were occupying Cambodia's territory in violation of her rights. The fact that the word incursion is used regularly in some newspapers is no justification for Bulletin's use of it.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR BERT C. GOSS

A memorial service was held in New York last week for Bert C. Goss, chairman of the board of Hill & Knowlton, who died on April 1 of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis at age 64.

In his eulogy, John W. Hill said, "I have never known anyone with such a rare combination of humor, erudition, unflagging drive and dedication. His integrity was absolute. His loyalty complete."

A 17-year member of OPC, Goss started his career as an educator with the U. of Chicago School of Business, coming to NYU in 1931. Three years later he was named an associate editor of the Journal of Commerce, later also reporting for Newsweek.

He entered the field of public relations in 1942 and joined H & K as vice-president in charge of Washington operations in 1945. A native of Springfield, Mo., Goss leaves a son Dennis of Groton, Mass., a daughter, Mrs. John D. Boyd, Jr., of Mountain Lakes, N.J., two grandsons and a brother, Homer, of Springfield.

WORLD-WIDE TICKER

By BERN REDMONT

PARIS — Robert B. Farrell, Paris bureau chief and senior correspondent of McGraw-Hill World News since 1956, has pulled up stakes with wife Adrienne and family, to move to Washington. He is new chief correspondent of the McGraw-Hill 30-man bureau in the nation's capital.

Aline Saarinen has been named NBC's new bureau chief of Paris — reportedly the first time a woman has been appointed in charge of a foreign news bureau for a TV-radio network. She replaces Garrick Utley, who returns to New York to participate in the weekly program "First Tuesday." Utley made a quick trip to Hong Kong to backstop NBC team that went into China. Mrs.

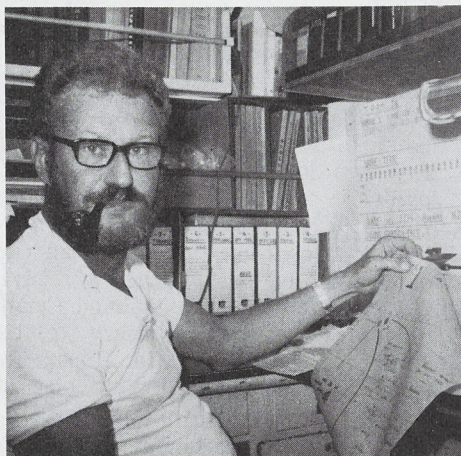

Saarinen is the widow of architect Eero Saarinen, and covered cultural and art developments for NBC in NY. NBC staffer David Burrington is also leaving Paris.

Anglo-American Press Association of Paris has issued its new 1971 directory, listing 195 active and associate members of American and British media. Under its 1971 president, Fred Painton, U.S. News & World Report, the association has held luncheons for Xuan Thuy, North Vietnamese delegate to the Paris peace talks; Maurice Doublet, prefect of Paris; Raymond Marcellin, Minister of Interior; Arthur Watson, U.S. Ambassador to France; and an unusual get-together of all top French Government press chiefs.

Friedmann sails Downunder

Tomas Friedmann flew off to New Zealand to produce a story for Yachting on the world's largest (73 ft.) plywood yacht, Buccaneer, and ended up covering the third annual yacht race from Whangarei to Numea, New Caledonia.

After British food ashore, Friedmann reports, the dining aboard the French Navy escorting vessel, La Dunkerquoise, (a former Canadian minesweeper) was an enormous treat. He's covering the race from the Dunkerquoise for New Zealand's Weekly News, says he'll have pix available at 879-1821, Presumably that's a New York not a Whangarei number.
